

Since 2000, the Chinese Communist Party (CCP)'s official media and hospitals across China started to report an explosive increase in the number of transplantations. The annual number increased from fewer than 100 transplants to over 10,000 transplants. Such a phenomenon has generated many questions, with the organ source being the most frequent question asked. However, the CCP has been very tight-lipped about the organ sources. In 2006, when the CCP's illicit organ procurement was exposed to the public, the CCP has been fabricating a series of lies to hide the real source of organs used in transplant operations.

Since late 2005, the Vice Minister of Health, Huang Jiefu, has been issuing statements and publishing articles regarding China's transplantation situation, while positioning himself as China's transplant authority and official spokesperson. Due to the lack of official statistics and Chinese Party-state's lack of transparency, Huang Jiefu had indeed become China's spokesperson on transplantation issues. Therefore, it is necessary to analyze Huang's statements and articles over the years in order to see through the CCP's lies.

This report includes Huang's public statements reported by the CCP's official media, overseas media, as well as Huang's published articles. Analysis of these statements proves that the CCP has been using deceptive methods in an attempt to hide its crime of live organ harvesting from Falun Gong practitioners.
