

The Chinese TV series "Journey to the West" was first made in 1986 in China, by producer Yang Jie. Due to extremely limited funds, the crew overcame many obstacles, and not only succeeded in completing the series, but also successfully depicted the morals and spirituality that Wu Cheng-en, the author of this ancient book tried to convey.

The TV series was broadcast more than 3000 times, and still is one of the most watched TV series in history.

However, a few film producers from Japan and Hong Kong have also made movies of "Journey to the West", but the producers themselves certainly went to the "West" alone, and not only changed the story line from the author of the original book, but also twisted the spirituality in the telling: The spirit of Gods, and the goodness of human nature was demonized, and lust and greediness wins the final battle.

They were maybe trying to make a comedy, but in fact, it became a twisted educational material for children, as the main audience these movie are targeting.

The irresponsible attitude and lack of morality of many film producers today is undermining the spiritual and moral side of society.

It's not a lone case, A movie made in 2014, "Noah", a clearly huge symbolic event in human history, was depicted also in a twisted form, please check this report by Mike Dice:

I'm a Christian. I knew it was going to be some sort of doctrine straight from hell as is all Hollywood now. I wanted to see just how they would twist the whole story of Noah. Amazing!!! they never mentioned the name God once in the whole movie. Now that's a clue isn't it?
